Dear Prayer Healing Friends,

We continue with the fifth installment of The Story of Edgar Cayce. Edgar Cayce had been working as a photographer away from his home town of Hopkinsville, trying to avoid giving additional readings. On a return trip home, his father introduced him to Dr. Wesley Ketchum, a homeopath, who was astounded by Cayce's gift after receiving a reading.

Thank you for being a part of this joyful service!

In Love and Light,

Karen Boldt

THE STORY OF EDGAR CAYCE: Kevin J. Todeschi

As a result, Dr. Ketchum started using Cayce's psychic talent in some of his most difficult cases. In 1910, Wesley Ketchum submitted a paper to the American Society of Clinical Research, calling Cayce a medical wonder. As a result, the October 9 issue of the New York Times featured a long article on Cayce's ability. The headline read: "Illiterate Man Becomes a Doctor When Hypnotized." Requests for readings began coming to Hopkinsville. In order to meet those requests, Dr. Wesley Ketchum, Edgar Cayce, Leslie Cayce, and Albert Noe, a hotel owner, formed the Psychic Reading Corporation. Edgar moved back to Hopkinsville, where he opened a photography studio, the Cayce Art Studio. He began to give readings in his spare time and became known as a "psychic diagnostician," although he was much happier as a photographer. It would not be until the following year that his attitude about the readings finally changed.

In one of the medical cases, a construction supervisor named Dalton severely fractured his leg and kneecap in an accident. He was told by several doctors in town that they could set the leg but, because of the seriousness of the injury, he would never be able to walk normally again. Apparently, Dalton's kneecap was damaged beyond repair. Not satisfied with their reports, Dalton consulted Dr. Wesley Ketchum. Cayce gave a reading and recommended what was then an extremely radical treatment: Ketchum was to drive several nails into the kneecap to hold it in place while it healed. The procedure was unheard of at the time but Ketchum, trusting in Cayce's ability, carried it out. The surgery was performed, and several months later Dalton was up and walking around as though the accident had never occurred. Edgar Cayce's fame continued to spread.

AS HELP IS RECEIVED, REMEMBER TO THANK GOD, THE GIVER OF ALL GOOD AND PERFECT GIFTS.

The Edgar Cayce readings emphasize the importance that those who are seeking help and healing through prayer actively participate in the prayer effort—praying for themselves and others on the list—creating a cooperative prayer effort. In the giving comes the receiving.

October 2020 Affirmation

“ . . . In Thy love, in Thy mercy, be near unto us now, as we seek comfort, guidance, direction in Thee . . . ” Edgar Cayce reading 281-50

A second son was born to Gertrude and Edgar in 1911. They named him Milton Porter. Soon after his birth, however, the baby developed whooping cough and, later, colitis. Several doctors were called in, but the baby continued to get worse. For some reason, Edgar Cayce never really thought about consulting his own readings until the doctors had given up all hope. As a last resort, Cayce gave a reading for his second son. When he woke up, he was shattered to learn that the condition was too serious. The readings offered no hope for the child, and the baby died before he was two months old.

Afterward, Cayce and his wife went into a state of depression. He blamed himself for not getting a reading sooner—perhaps it might have helped; now he would never know. Gertrude's health took a turn for the worse. She became weak after the baby's death, causing the doctor to think she had contracted pleurisy. As the months passed, the illness hung on, and she showed no signs of improvement. In fact, she was getting worse and was eventually confined to bed. By late summer, Gertrude's doctor had changed his diagnosis. He called Cayce aside and spoke the awful truth: Gertrude had tuberculosis and was dying. A specialist confirmed that nothing further could be done. Everyone expected her to die by the end of the year, except for her husband. Not knowing what else to do, Edgar gave a reading. While in the sleep state, he recommended a combination of prescription drugs as well as filling a charred oak keg with apple brandy. Gertrude was to inhale the fumes to clear up the congestion. Although the doctors claimed that the combination of drugs would be useless, Dr. Ketchum wrote the prescription anyway. After following this treatment for only two days, Gertrude felt better, and her fever had fallen. By September, she was better still, and by November, even her doctors decided that she was going to get well. By the first of January 1912, Gertrude Cayce was fully recovered.
